Source A

A painting entitled 'The Harvest of Battle', by the British artist, CWR Nevinson, 1919.

It was painted as part of a record of the First World War. Nevinson based his painting on sketches made during a visit to the Western Front in 1917.

Adapted from a speech by the German Kaiser, Wilhelm II, to young sailors in 1901.

Despite not having a strong navy, Germany has gained a place in the sun. I am proud of these conquests which will benefit our children and grandchildren. It is now my task to make sure that these colonies remain ours, so that Germany's foreign trade, industry and agriculture continue to grow. Our future will rely on naval power so the more of you that go to sea, the better it will be for Germany.

Source C

A British cartoon published in 1909 commenting on the German and British navies.

It shows a German sailor singing and dancing whilst a British sailor looks on.

German sailor "We don't want to fight, but if we do,
We've got the ships, we've got the men, we've got the money too."

British sailor "That's my song!"

German sailor "Well, it's mine now!"
