Council to Allow Developments

In a move that will come as a shock to many, the council is considering granting planning permission to the controversial Northgate High scheme. The developers, Appletree Holdings, plan to demolish the eighteenth century church of St Hilda and the nearby priests' house as well as building over the old graveyard. In their place Appletree hope to build a shopping mall which will include a betting shop, a beauty and tanning salon and a pizza parlour. The developers also hope to construct a bowling alley and leisure centre on the site of the old parish hall.

Here at The Sentinel, we would welcome your views, whether for or against the planned developments.
